

Presidential Search Update: Building a strong, diverse pool of candidates

We hope the fall term is going well and that you and yours remain in good health. We are writing on behalf of the Presidential Search Committee with an update on our continued progress.

We are very pleased to share that the search is moving ahead well and on schedule. The committee members met recently to discuss the recruitment of candidates and to initiate the systematic review of applications.

We learned from our Storbeck Search consultants that the OLLU opportunity is resonating positively among prospective candidates. The University's mission and strong momentum are attracting compelling leaders to the search, and we look forward to engaging with them.

The multi-faceted process of building a strong and diverse pool of well-qualified candidates is ongoing. We ask once more for your help in identifying promising prospects or people who might be able to suggest such prospects. Please reach out to our consulting team, Julie Tea and Lindsay Allison, at OLLUPresident@storbecksearch.com with names and contact information related to any potential candidates.

The committee members will meet again in November to begin reducing the pool of applicants to a smaller group for further review and evaluation.

The search prospectus continues to be available for your review on University's Presidential Search website.

On behalf of the search committee, we will share additional updates with you as we move ahead with our work. Please feel free to reach us with any questions at PresidentialSearch@ollusa.edu. Thank you for your support.

Sincerely,
Steve O'Donnell and Rosalinda Garcia
Presidential Search Committee Co-Chairs