Dr. Biever and I implemented the Outcome Rating Scales and Session Rating Scales at the CCS in order to track efficacy of the therapy provided by our students. We just upgraded the recording software to My Outcomes in order to analyze the data more effectively. Joan and I also became Certified Trainers for the PCOMS so that we can train the CCS supervisors but also to train offsite practicum supervisors as well. The opportunity to gather data to provide the most beneficial services to our clients as well as to contribute to the scholarship in the profession is a wonderful opportunity.

I developed a biopsychosocial assessment format for families who are threatened by separation because a family member is undocumented and pending deportation. I have also become involved in VAWA cases to assist women in obtaining permission to stay. I recognized this as a great area of need and educated myself on this process when I discovered how expensive this was for families, already overwhelmed and feeling powerless. I have conducted over 1800 evaluations to date with successful outcomes. In addition, I have provided therapy to these families as well. The families have been from Mexico, Guatemala, El Salvador, Nicaragua, Honduras, Pakistan, India, and Nigeria –to name a few.

August 1995- June 2002
Involved in looking at how families cope with living with the sustained uncertainty of the diagnosis of chronic illness, in particular organ transplantation. Conducted a qualitative study on dealing with the chronic stress. Also did a poster session on a case study of how a Latino family dealt with the stress of organ transplantation and the death of their child. I continue to study the effectiveness of taking a multicultural approach to support transplant families.

University of Texas at San Antonio
May 1990-May 1992
Involved in the development and planning of developmental issues involving relationships between mothers and their children under the age of ten. Data was analyzed in terms of cultural and socioeconomic aspects. I assisted in creating the assessment instruments as well as their administration. I also assisted in the statistical evaluation on SPSS of the resulting data and was involved in the preparation of a presentation for the American Psychological Association in Seattle, Washington.
